#PSRAGA40Under40

What does success look like? Keep scrolling, and you'll see!

Now in its second year, the Forty Under 40 awards program honors rising stars who excel in public relations, marketing, advertising and/or social media roles, while also giving back to their industry and community. That means actively impacting and growing in their "paying job" then turning around and giving back to where they live and work – a combination needed now more than ever.

This year's diverse group of honorees was nominated by their peers – many receiving several nominations – as true standouts, making their selection by a committee of former PRSA Georgia Chapter presidents and previous Forty Under 40 honorees both easy and hard. The great communicators in the pages below are the people you should know, if you don't already. If they're not trending or in the headlines, they are often making sure their clients, companies or products are!

Take a moment to get to know the game-changers who are breathing new life into communications through new expertise, leadership and innovation.

Thank you to our friends and partners who helped us get this program continue; to the individuals who nominated a friend or colleague; to the legion of former PRSA Georgia presidents who offered their time and insights to select our honorees. We couldn't have done this without you!

As we celebrate, be thinking of exceptional professionals, companies and students who you feel are deserving of this honor for 2021.

Thank you for your support and enjoy the celebration!

Regards, Elizabeth McMillan, APR PRSA Georgia President

Media Frenzy Global

An enthusiastic and creative storyteller, Nikkia boasts 10+years of media and integrated communications experience, specializing in strategic brand visibility across PR and digital media channels for a variety of national and international companies. With a diversified background across corporate and agency environments, she currently serves as PR Director for Media Frenzy Global, leading content and strategy through planning, executing and integrating intuitive media strategies for innovative and disruptive brands around the world. A believer in cultivating an inclusive, forward-thinking workplace culture in Communications, Nikkia leads a team of diverse talent.

Most recently, Nikkia spearheaded research culminating in a report, in conjunction with the National Black Public Relations Society(BPRS), on the disproportionate impacts of COVID-19 specifically on black communications professionals. Nikkia is an active board member of the Atlanta Chapter of BPRS and volunteers for the Atlanta Business Chronicle's Mentoring Monday program. She is a frequent contributor to PRNews and O'Dwyer's and most recently, a featured speaker at the National Diversity Council's Georgia Leadership Conference as well as the upcoming PRSA ICON International Conference. An Atlanta native and avid yogi, Nikkia obtained her Bachelor of Arts degree at Georgia State University where she studied Journalism with a concentration in Public Relations.

An information junkie, Emily dives deep into current events, keeping the complex industries and the Full Tilt accounts she supports in mind as she analyzes dozens of daily newsletters in her inbox. Emily synthesizes the data she gathers into easily digestible formats for clients and coworkers alike, identifying trends and best practices along the way. Despite a deluge of information and an evolving social media landscape, Emily balances traditional tactics with up-to-the-minute experimentation for clients and for the team.

With experience in nonprofit and retail management, she brings a diverse outside perspective to marketing, communications and public relations as she pursues additional professional certifications in addition to her current Sprout Agency Partner, Hootsuite Social Media Marketing and HubSpot Inbound Marketing credentials. Emily cares deeply about her community, from her own backyard to nationwide causes, supporting To Write Love on Her Arms, WABE Atlanta, NPR, and the Navy-Marine Corps Relief Society. Because Full Tilt's culture focuses on integrity, empowering others and caring deeply in all things, it's an ideal fit for Emily's commitment to excellence in both her professional and personal life.

Since 2013, Rachel has managed marketing and communications for Park Pride — the Atlanta-based nonprofit that engages communities to activate the power of parks — supporting the growth and cohesion of Atlanta's parks constituency and bolstering the organization's reputation as the "voice for parks."

From digital, to print, to social, video, and public relations, Rachel's breadth of communication experience has helped raise local awareness of Park Pride's mission and impact, establishing its position as a thought leader in greenspace.

Prior to Park Pride, Rachel introduced Atlantans to the ride-sharing app Uber as area's first local Community Manager. She's also served as a Community Development Volunteer with the United States Peace Corps in Morocco, where she focused her efforts on empowering community children with the knowledge, skills, and inspiration to tackle environmental challenges in their village.

Katy Mallory – like many other communicators – enjoys wearing many hats and doesn't like to sit still. In addition to being a mom, Katy is Director of Internal Communications at Cox Automotive, supporting Sales + Marketing, Digital Content and Mobility – and she is co-founder and CEO of baby products company SlumberPod.

In her current "day job," Katy is responsible for executive communications and employee engagement for Cox Automotive's 2,200-team member sales and marketing organization. She also oversees channel strategy and digital content strategy for the digital platforms used by Cox Automotive's 20,000-plus team members as well as communications for Cox Automotive Mobility — a new growth area for the company.

You may have seen Katy and her mom Lou on Shark Tank in January when they walked away with a coveted partnership with Barbara Cochran. Katy is especially proud of the company's sales (25,000+ units in two years), and of co-creating the marketing strategy that's led to strong sales. Katy has grown SlumberPod's Instagram following to nearly 30,000 followers and Facebook to 4,500. The company is on track to release several new products this year. Aware of how many people helped her on her journey, Katy regularly and eagerly provides advice to early stage entrepreneurs, especially women.

Katy is a proud graduate of the University of Georgia's Grady College of Journalism (PR degree). She and her husband share a chaotic yet lively and fun household with their three young daughters and two dogs in Decatur.

She currently leads the Employer Brand and Recruitment Marketing team at Delta Air Lines and has held leadership roles at Cox Enterprises and Cox Communications. Additionally, she is a founding board member for the Talent Brand Alliance and contributes to the award-winning human resources site Fistful of Talent.

Holland is a graduate of The Florida State University and lives in Piedmont Heights with her husband and two dogs. When she can, she steals away to visit her family back home in Florida.

Born in Ocean Springs, Mississippi, Lindsay Miles earned a bachelor's in business administration from Mississippi University for Women in 2011. After graduation, she moved to College Station, Texas, where she worked in the Colleges of Engineering and Liberal Arts at Texas A&M University.

During her time at Texas A&M, she served in many marketing and communications roles—all aimed at building relationships with donors and alumni. She grounded her experiences in digital communications by overhauling websites, establishing social media channels and creating content to keep audiences engaged, and running successful email marketing campaigns targeting students, alumni, and donors.

Her notable projects at Texas A&M include serving as a project lead for the university's inaugural participation in SXSW, redesigning the College of Liberal Arts' website, working with retired-NASCAR driver Jeff Gordon to promote a hands-on learning experience for students, and managing groundbreaking event for a multimillion-dollar campus building.

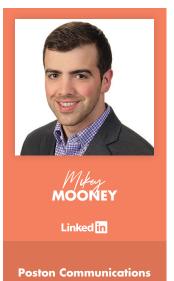

She moved to Atlanta in 2017 and began working for the division of Advancement and Alumni Engagement at Emory University. She oversees digital communications, which include email marketing, social media management and marketing, web development, and video production targeting alumni and donors. She currently lives OTP with her husband and two dogs, Swayze and Oby.

As a Vice President at Weber Shandwick, Janelle's focus on multi-cultural marketing has impacted programming for brands like McDonald's, Mars Food's Uncle Ben's and Unilever's TRESemme, while she takes a general market approach to her work for Mars' M&M'S and The Coca-Cola Company's AHA brand. Janelle is also a vocal driver of DEI and reputation building initiatives for the Weber's Atlanta office. She also sits on the leadership team of the agency's Black employee resource group, NOIR.

Originally from New York, Janelle has called Atlanta home for the past five years, where she enjoys scouring the many home décor boutiques in West Midtown for one of a kind pieces for her home.

Janelle is graduate of the State University of New York at Albany.

Meredith Pierce is Wilbert's digital supervisor, overseeing social media strategy, content creation and campaigns for clients. Meredith joined the Wilbert team in 2015, and has worked to increase and hone the firm's digital capabilities and suite of services to offer clients top-of-the-line social media programs including paid social and branded graphics and videos.

With expertise in the real estate and hospitality industries, Meredith crafts and deploys targeted digital strategies to reach the right audience and drive real results for every client. She also enjoys helping with the firm's probono work for City of Refuge.

Meredith has a background in restaurant and hospitality PR and a degree in public relations from the University of Georgia. Outside of the office, Meredith loves to travel, box, hike with her rescue dog Gemma and eat her way around Buford Highway.

Jason Rollins has extensive experience at impressive Atlanta-based companies, including: IHG Hotels & Resorts, Children's Healthcare of Atlanta, global agencies like Edelman and MSL, and Arby's, where he was a key member of the award-winning team that delivered the Pharrell Hat & Jon Stewart activations, along with 23 consecutive quarters of same-store sales growth. He has led internal and external communications for large-scale transformation programs for multi-billion-dollar brands, including Crowne Plaza Hotels & Resorts and the Arby's brand revitalization. His work at these organizations have become case studies for our profession, and he has volunteered his time to serve as a speaker or panelist for many PRSA Georgia events and contributed content to various publications so that others can learn from his work.

Since joining PRSA | GA nearly 15 years ago, Jason served as the College Relations Committee Co-Chair for several years, helping to educate future PR professionals on the "Real World." After receiving his Accreditation in 2012, he mentored numerous colleagues going through the process. In addition to making an impact through his involvement in PRSA, he has served the community with his time, expertise and passion. Jason most enjoys giving back by mentoring the next generation of marketing & PR professionals and serving organizations focused on children in need. He has served as a frequent guest speaker and adjunct professor of Marketing & PR at his MBA alma mater, Mercer University.

Alison Sawyer is the senior director of communications at The Arthur M. Blank Family Foundation. In this role Alison leads all marketing and communication strategies, social media efforts, and media relations for the Foundation. She is motivated by finding the untold story, fueled by endless curiosity and chasing potential and driven by the opportunity to dream up campaigns that create true brand loyalty and belief.

Before joining The Blank Family Foundation, Alison worked in sports and entertainment PR at the Atlanta Hawks, Premiere Exhibitions, The Active Network and the Women's Sports Foundation.

A native Californian, Alison graduated from the University of California Santa Cruz with a bachelor's degree in Pre-Law Studies. She serves on the board of Giving Kitchen, a nonprofit that provides emergency assistance to food service workers through financial support and a network of community resources. Alison and her wife, Ashlyn, have a 10-month-old son Nash.

Sarah began her career with the Metro Atlanta Chamber in 2014 and grew into her role as Senior Program Coordinator of Innovation & Entrepreneurship. During her time, she assisted in growing the innovation ecosystem through supporting Atlanta's many startup hubs and highereducation institutions. She was responsible for developing targeted communications to market Atlanta as an innovation hub. She maintained programs and projects such as; The Open Innovation Forum, Innovation Indicators Project and supported university-based entrepreneur programs.

Prior to joining the Chamber, Sarah gained experience through interning at the Georgia Department of Economic Development with the International Trade team, and at Armstrong Atlantic State University as a teaching assistant in the Education and Foreign Language departments. These roles helped her reconnect with her concentrations in Spanish and International Business.

Currently, she works as a consultant with KWI Communications where she supports clients by creating opportunities for community. For the last two years she has worked on a broad spectrum of internal communications with Chick-fil-A, Inc.

As a Georgia native and an Atlanta transplant, she enjoys all the city has to offer, from discovering new restaurants and attending concerts to frequenting Piedmont's dog park. Sarah resides in East Atlanta Village with her four year old dog, Finley, and is an active volunteer with Agape, City of Refuge and East Atlanta Community Association.

With a decade of consumer and B2B experience, Erica Smith joined the Atlanta office as an account manager in April 2018. Erica leads the agency team responsible for providing strategy and counsel for grocery retailer Food Lion. She also supports the Bayer Crop Science and Bayer AG businesses, managing out on U.S. and global business programs and events in areas including executive visibility, reputation management, thought leadership, media relations, partnerships and content development. In the Atlanta office, she serves as the Diversity Champion, providing strategic counsel, leadership and programmatic efforts to clients and PN employees.

Prior to joining PN, Erica was the corporate communications and public relations manager at Delta Vacations for nearly two years where she created and executed external communications programs to drive brand awareness and visibility with travel agents and consumers. Her expertise has landed her clients coverage in publications including Forbes, SKY magazine, USA Today, Fast Company, Washington Post, Marketwatch, CNBC, TODAY, Fox Business, The New York Times and Business News Daily, among others.

Erica holds degrees in Advertising and Spanish from the University of Georgia and has spent time abroad living in Southeast Asia and South America. When she's not at work, she is working on The BW Factor, a community she founded to help Black and Latinx women ascend to senior levels within their organizations.

Elisabeth Warrick currently serves as the Brand Communications Manager for First Advantage, a leading global provider of identity and information solutions. In this role, Elisabeth leads brand messaging and manages all internal and external communications.

Previously, Elisabeth managed corporate communications at Cox Automotive, where she supported the Technology and Marketing organizations. In 2015, she received the Up and Coming Marketer of the Year Award from the Technology Association of Georgia (TAG). Earlier in her career, she served as writer and editor for a variety of organizations, including an industry trade publication and regional magazine group.

Elisabeth received her undergraduate degree in Journalism from the University of Georgia and her Master's degree in Business Administration from Georgia Tech. She lives with her husband, JP, and toddler, Lucy, in Roswell.

After a long story that's best told over a beer, Anna Ruth woke up one morning in 2012 and decided to start her own tech PR agency. With just an old laptop, a small family loan and a vision to chart the future of PR, it was game on. Her first employee was her dog, but that quickly turned into more than 20 humans, and ARPR rose to become the 2016 Technology Agency of the Year, a three-time PR News' TOP Place to Work and one of the top 30 largest tech PR firms in the country (O'Dwyers). In 2017, Anna Ruth earned a spot on PR News' 50 Game-Changers in PR list, and in 2015 she was named Early Stage Entrepreneur of the Year by the Metro Atlanta Chamber.

A self-professed traditional PR purist, she's worked with some of the nation's biggest outlets, such as CNN, Fast Company, Forbes, TechCrunch and Wall Street Journal. In addition to pitching journalists and writing longform, she loves leading messaging sessions, content brainstorms and media trainings for clients. And nothing gets her blood pumping more than a crisis communication situation. When she's not in Delta 10A, Anna Ruth is in endless pursuit of automating her home, watching every documentary on Netflix, covering things in glitter, and taking flight on her yoga mat.
